

Medicines use and prescribing

Debbie McCahon and Rupert Payne, University of Bristol

At Bristol we have broad interests covering a range of topics related to the rational and safe use of medicines in primary care. We are keen to work collaboratively with colleagues across SPCR schools on shared interests in medicines use and prescribing in general and perhaps more specifically in the areas of polypharmacy, deprescribing, medicines optimisation and pharmacoepidemiology. The purpose of this group will be to facilitate new collaboration and crossover, enable sharing of methodological and clinical expertise and support the identification and development of collaborative grant applications.
